Unprecedented amounts of U.S. Federal spending for COVID relief are distributed to States, Territories, and the Freely Associated

States. The volume and speed of this spending makes it a critical topic for island auditors. This two-hour session will convene an expert panel of auditors to consider past audit work on U.S. COVID spending, the current opportunities and challenges for COVID auditing, and the future of COVID audits in the region. Island auditors will find the program both timely and important in supporting their accountability mission. The session will be of interest to island audit and accountability professionals interested in prior and current audit work in the field, as well as next steps for Pacific Island COVID auditing.
